Notting Hill & Portobello Road

Notting Hill is an area in West London. It is famous for the annual Notting Hill Carnival and because it was the setting for the 1999 film starring Julia Roberts and Hugh Grant.

The area is very fashionable there are large Victorian houses and high-class shops and restaurants.

The most famous road of the Notting Hill district is Portobello Road.

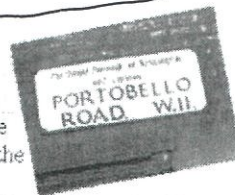

On Saturdays it is home to Portobello Road Market, a street market famous for second-hand clothes and antiques. It is a popular tourist attraction.

The architecture of this road is characteristic: the road curves gracefully along its length and there are Victorian terrace houses and shops. It is also the setting of Paulo Coelho's novel The Witch of Portobello.

you can stop at one of the cafés along the way.

There's a fascinating restaurant off Portobello on Elenheim Crescent, it's a bookshop with a tiny kitchen in the rear and a few tables. You can read a book and taste good pastries or soups. Its name is Books for Cooks.

Portobello Market is mainly for antiques, but there are also fruit and vegetable stalls and many different products. In the area there are many small, where you can find anything from carpets to silver, or teddy bears or even a First Folio of Shakespeare.

You can also encounter some musicians along the route, a boy playing drums, or a Peruvian band playing pipe music or even a tap dancer in a top hat.

Portobello is noisy and lively! Walking and shopping makes you hungry at some point along the way. If you want something quickly and then continue to shop, there are wonderful hot food stalls in the fruit and vegetable area of the market. There are stalls selling every kind of breads and croissants. But if you need some rest,
